The rule, in plain English

Kansas: register your homeschool once as a non-accredited private school. You must teach about the same period as the public schools — usually 186 days. There is no fixed statutory hour count and no required subjects; instruction must be planned and scheduled.

Your records checklist

- ❑ File your state's required notice, affidavit, or registration — before the deadline.
- ❑ Keep a daily log of instruction by subject for each child.
- ❑ Track days of instruction toward 186/year and keep an attendance register.
- ❑ Save work samples / a portfolio for each child (a few per subject, per term).
- ❑ Keep a curriculum & reading list of what you taught.
- ❑ Keep any evaluations or progress notes you choose to do.
- ❑ Build a high-school transcript as you go (grades 9–12) so credits aren't reconstructed later.
- ❑ Store immunization or exemption records if your state requires them.
- ❑ Keep everything in one place, backed up — so a records request is a non-event.

Tired of tracking all this on paper?

Cultivate logs your hours, subjects, attendance and work samples automatically — then generates print-ready compliance reports and transcripts for your state. One app for homeschool and home life.

This is a plain-English summary for your convenience (verified June 2026), not legal advice. Cultivate helps you store, organize, and produce your homeschool records — it isn't the authority on what your state requires. Homeschool laws change; always confirm current rules with your state or a homeschool legal resource (e.g., HSLDA) before relying on them. Source citation shown above.
