Ohio Homeschool Compliance Checklist

What to track to stay compliant · for your records · verified June 2026

Your requirements at a glance

| | |
|---|---|
| Instruction required | No state-set minimum hours or days |
| Standardized testing | No standardized testing required |
| Legal citation | ORC 3321.042 |

The rule, in plain English

Ohio: notice to the superintendent (within 5 days / by Aug 30). A 2023 law abolished the 900-hour rule and all testing and assessment. Required subjects include English language arts, math, science, history, government, and social studies.

Your records checklist

- ❑ File your state's required notice, affidavit, or registration — before the deadline.
- ❑ Keep a daily log of instruction by subject for each child.
- ❑ Track instructional time and keep an attendance/days record.
- ❑ Save work samples / a portfolio for each child (a few per subject, per term).
- ❑ Keep a curriculum & reading list of what you taught.
- ❑ Keep any evaluations or progress notes you choose to do.
- ❑ Build a high-school transcript as you go (grades 9–12) so credits aren't reconstructed later.
- ❑ Store immunization or exemption records if your state requires them.
- ❑ Keep everything in one place, backed up — so a records request is a non-event.

Tired of tracking all this on paper?

Cultivate logs your hours, subjects, attendance and work samples automatically — then generates print-ready compliance reports and transcripts for your state. One app for homeschool and home life.

This is a plain-English summary for your convenience (verified June 2026), not legal advice. Cultivate helps you store, organize, and produce your homeschool records — it isn't the authority on what your state requires. Homeschool laws change; always confirm current rules with your state or a homeschool legal resource (e.g., HSLDA) before relying on them. Source citation shown above.
